John Barlow, who has also served as interim HR manager, will now head up the business after being appointed as the firm's new HR manager on Tuesday (21 January). It is understood that Barlow is to be given a contract of two years and a salary of £35,000. Barlow is a graduate from the University of Southampton. In the last ten years he has worked at seven businesses, including two companies that he founded. CHRI is a long-standing member of the Confederation of HR Management (CHRM), the UK's leading HR professional body, and is also part of the HR Today group. CHRI is a leading provider of HR consultancy, with a strong heritage and reputation built over 15 years in the HR services market. The Minnesota Vikings are in a unique position this week because of the combination of a bye week and a three-day weekend. With the team playing in Houston this week, players are using the extra time to rest and recover. That means it's probably a good time for players to bring their families. Here's a look at some of the Vikings' players and their upcoming availability: WR Stefon Diggs: "It's been two weeks, two weeks since I've been on a practice field." - Diggs via @WGR550 Diggs has been nursing a lingering ankle injury that has kept him out of the Vikings' last three games. He practiced in full for the first time since Week 2, but the team is still being cautious with the rookie receiver. WR Laquon Treadwell: "I'll be back soon." - Treadwell via @WGR550 Treadwell missed Saturday's practice with a shoulder injury, but he hasn't been ruled out for Sunday's game against the Texans. The Vikings haven't said much about the status of Treadwell, who is battling back from an ankle injury he suffered in Week 1. CB Trae Waynes: "I don't know. I think we'll see. I think, like I said, the last couple weeks, I haven't done a lot of stuff, so I'll just see how I feel this week." - 82157476af
